

Instructor: Date:

Learner: Regional Branch:

Program: Center:

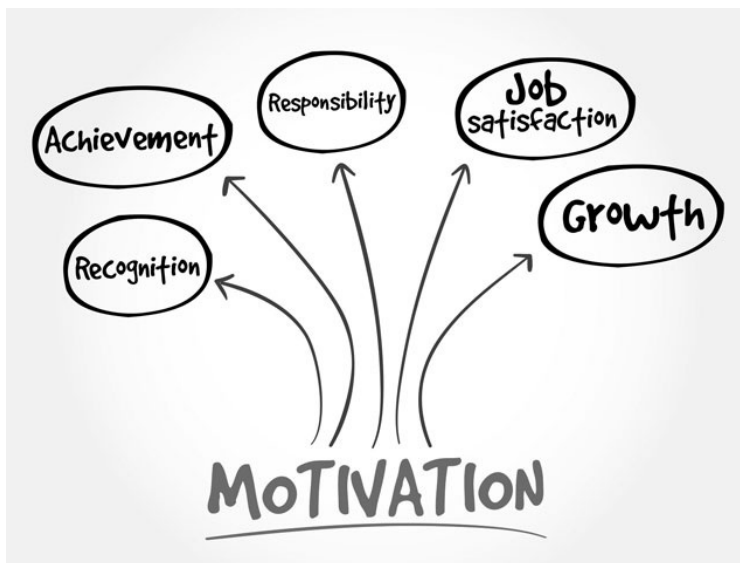

CONTENT

- Let's Start! • Let's Explore! • Let's Practice! • Extension Activity • Target Words • Learning Points

Let's Start!

What does a boss implement to motivate employees? Let's find out!

Learning Outcome

Express duty, advice, willingness, or intention to do something in spoken or written texts and in work and social contexts.

Ask your partner:

- How do you stay motivated at school or work?
- What are you usually motivated by?

Can Do Statements

- I can talk about work and dealing with customers.
- I can express annoyance, reluctance or defeat using may as well or might as well.
- I can express advice in the present and in the past.

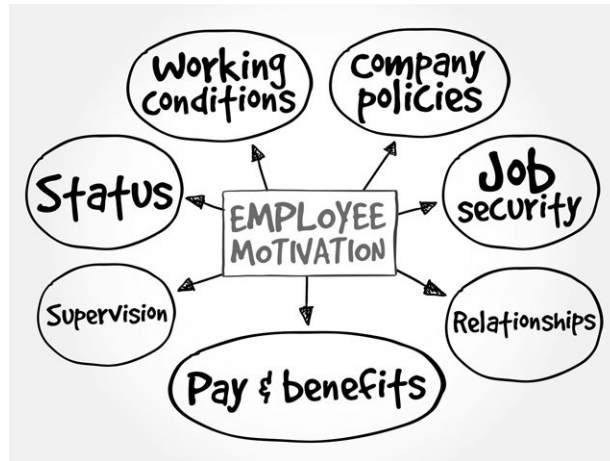

Let's Explore!

Envisioning* a change is the way to go!

* To "envision" means to imagine something that you think might happen in the future.

Instructions: Read the text aloud.

Many restaurateurs are going green, but employee motivation may not be the first thing that comes to mind. Incorporating green practices into your restaurant has many employee-related benefits.

How can you increase employee motivation? It's simple. You might as well harness the power of the bright minds of your employees. You should ask your staff what they would like to see. How do they envision their ideal workplace? What is your organization not doing that would make a difference to your employees? You may as well sit down with your team on a regular basis and brainstorm ideas.

From there, you ought to arm your employees with the power to use their skills and ideas to implement change that will benefit the organization. You'd better increase employee motivation further by offering incentives to the person that comes up with the most innovative idea to solve a problem, save energy, reduce water use or waste. By involving your employees in this process, the restaurant will benefit from a staff that is more engaged, proud and committed.

Keep the motivation going. You'd better share your successes and celebrate your accomplishments by rewarding your hard-working staff on a job well done. If your energy bills were down five per cent because of an employee's idea, you might as well share that with the team and give them a pat on the back to show the team the value of their efforts and your appreciation. When your organization is doing important things, you might just as well find that people want to be a part of that and will be motivated by it.

Creating a workplace that cares about the environment generates a feeling of pride among your employees which will result in a team that is excited about coming to work and making a difference in their community!

Let's Practice!

Let's talk about keeping up motivation at work.

Instructions: Proofread the text below. Circle the incorrect words. Write the correct word above the incorrect one. Read the correct text aloud. Check your pronunciation with your instructor.

Many restaurateurs is going green, but employee motivation may not been the first thing that comes to mind. Incorporating green practices into your restaurant have many employee-related benefits. Creating a workplace that cares about the environmental generates a feeling of pride among your employees. That fact will resulted in a team that is excited about coming to work and making a difference in their community!

Let's Practice!

Vanessa wants to incorporate green practices in her restaurant.

Instructions: Complete the sentences below by choosing from the options that you are given. Read the complete sentences aloud. Check your pronunciation with your instructor.

had better share / should ask / You'd better increase / should work with / ought to arm

1. You _____ your staff what they would like to see.
2. You _____ employees with the power to use their skills to implement change that will benefit the organization.
3. _____ employee motivation by offering incentives to the person who comes up with the most innovative idea to solve a problem.
4. You _____ successes by rewarding your hard-working staff on a job well done.
5. You _____ waste food by donating it to food banks.

Extension Activity

Watch and react to a video on TED Talks.

Instructions: Complete the following steps. Fill in the Self-Assessment.

- Search online for the TED talk by Michael Norton "How to Buy Happiness".
- Watch the video and take notes of the main ideas.
- Watch the video a second time. (You can use the transcript for extra help.)
- Write a short summary of what Michael Norton says in his talk.
- Include details about how money can make people happy and any new terms that he introduces.
- Share these ideas with your family and friends. What do they think? What did you think about the ideas presented in his talk?

Self-Assessment

Yes No

I watch a video about happiness.

☐ ☐

I take notes of the main ideas.

☐ ☐

I write a summary of the ideas presented.

☐ ☐

I share these ideas with family and friends.

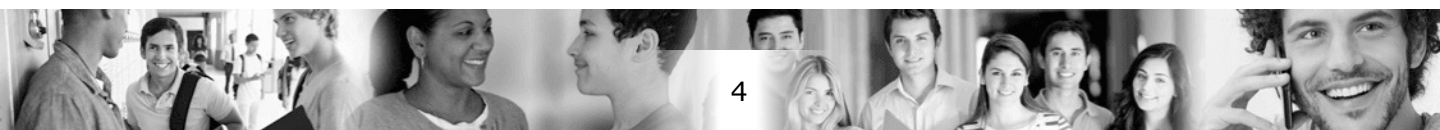

☐ ☐

I offer my own opinions about the talk.

☐ ☐

Target Words

- motivation (noun): eagerness and willingness to do something without needing to be told or forced to do it
e.g. Many restaurateurs are going green, but employee motivation may not be the first thing that comes to mind.
- to harness (verb): to use the natural force or power of something e.g. You might as well harness the power of the bright minds you employ.
- to arm (verb): to provide all the information, skills, or equipment you need to do something e.g. You ought to arm your employees with the power to use their skills and ideas to implement change.
- to increase (verb): to become bigger in amount, number, or degree e.g. You'd better increase employee motivation further by offering incentives to the person that comes up with the most innovative idea.
- to reward (verb): to give something to someone because they have done something good or helpful or have worked for it e.g. You had better share your successes and celebrate your accomplishments by rewarding your hard-working staff on a job well done.
- to result (verb): to make something happen
e.g. Creating a workplace that cares about the environment generates a feeling of pride among your employees which will result in a team that is excited about coming to work.

Learning Points

May (just) As Well/Might (just) As Well

You use may as well and might as well to make suggestions. You use these phrases to suggest what you think is the easiest or most logical choice in a situation.

You use may as well when the situation you are talking about is fairly certain.

Example: I am off for the day. I may as well do all my Christmas shopping today. = I am certain to be off today. I can do my Christmas shopping.

You use might as well to suggest a higher level of uncertainty.

Example: I'm not sure when I'll get another break, so I might as well do my Christmas shopping today. = I'm not sure whether I'll have a break at another point in time, so I should do my Christmas shopping.

Note: The phrase just as well means a good or fortunate thing.

Examples:

- You might as well harness the power of the bright minds you employ.
- You may as well sit down with your team on a regular basis and brainstorm ideas.
- You might as well share that with the team and give them a pat on the back to show the team the value of their efforts and your appreciation.
- You may just as well find that people want to be a part of that and will be motivated by it.

Learning Points

Using Should, Ought to, and Had Better

You use modals like should, ought to or had better to give advice.

The most common modals for giving advice are: should, ought to and had better.

You can think of modals as “helping verbs”. They add meaning to the main verb of a sentence. In this case, these modals add the meaning of advice.

Should is the most common modal used to give advice. You also use should for questions. Ought to is used for giving strong advice.

Had better is much stronger than either should or ought to. It is used to give an order or to suggest that something negative will happen if you refuse the advice.

Look at the following structures:

Subject	Modal	Main Verb + Advice
You	should/shouldn't	talk to the customers nicely.
You	ought to	focus on the service.
You	had better	keep our customers happy.

Examples:

- You had better share your successes and celebrate your accomplishments by rewarding your hard-working staff on a job well done.
- You should ask your staff what they would like to see.
- You ought to envision the ideal workplace.
- You'd better increase employee motivation further by offering incentives.

