Let's Start!

Writing Spot: Bistro 88 is hiring!

Learning Outcome

Express duty, advice, willingness, or intention to do something in spoken or written texts and in work and social contexts.

Ask your partner:

- How many different jobs have you had in the past? Were they in the same industry? Explain.
- What key information should be included in a job advertisement? What shouldn't be included?

Can Do Statements

- I can write a job ad.
- I can express that a fairly certain condition will be fulfilled using when or if.
- I can express advice and make suggestions to varying degrees.

Let's Explore!

Vanessa needs to hire some new staff, but will the applicants have what it takes?

* To "have what it takes" means will they have the skills and experience.

Instructions: Read the text aloud.

Look at this job advertisement. Do you think I should apply?
If you don't apply, you will regret it. You had better brush off that résumé of yours.

Learning Points

Writing Tip: When and If

You use if and when in the First Conditional with if-clauses to exchange opinions about possible future outcomes.

You use the First Conditional to say it's possible that you will or will not do something. In that condition, something else may, may not, will or will not happen. The outcome is not in the present, but in the future.

Structure: If/When + Present Simple ... will + verb ...

You use when for things or events that are certain to occur.

Example: When you finish your application, you'll receive a notification. = It is certain that you will receive a notification.

You use if for things that will possibly happen.

Example: If you are the right person for the job, we will let you know. = You may be the right person for the job, but it is not certain.

Examples:

- When your online application is complete you will receive a confirmation e-mail.
- If you have the skills and experience, you will hear from us.
- When you look back on your decision to apply, you won't be disappointed.
- If you don't apply, you will regret it.

Learning Points

Writing Tip: Should, Ought to, Had Better

You use modals like should, ought to, or had better to give strong advice, suggestions and recommendations.

The most common modals for giving advice are: should, ought to and had better.

You can think of modals as “helping verbs”. They add meaning to the main verb of a sentence. In this case, these modals add the meaning of advice.

You use these modals according to the level of suggestion you want to express.

Should is the most common modal used to give advice. You also use should for questions. Ought to is used for giving strong advice.

Had better is much stronger than either should or ought to. It is used to give an order or to suggest that something negative will happen if you refuse the advice.

Look at the following structures:

Subject	Modal	Main Verb + Advice	Type
You	should/shouldn't	talk to the customers nicely.	strong advice
You	ought to	focus on the service.	stronger advice
You	had better	keep our customers happy.	strongest advice
