

Instructor: Date:

Learner: Regional Branch:

Program: Center:

CONTENT

• Let's Start! • Let's Explore! • Let's Practice! • Extension Activity • Target Words • Learning Points

Let's Start!

Pronunciation Spot: What can be done to encourage customer loyalty?

Learning Outcome

Describe emotions and feelings in present and past situations in spoken or written texts and in work and social contexts.

Ask your partner:

- What makes you want to go back to a restaurant?
- What makes you decide not to go back to a restaurant?

Can Do Statements

- I can talk about work and dealing with customers.
- I can say and use words like month and accentuate.
- I can use proper intonation with lists.

Let's Explore!

What makes the heart of a loyalty program?

* To be "the heart of" something means to be the most important part of something.

Instructions: Read the text aloud.

A loyalty program can provide a method of engaging your guests and increasing their spending in your restaurant. Every loyalty program is comprised of three basic elements: a core program, layered programs and promotions.

The core program is the heart of any restaurant loyalty program. Its purpose is to attract guests to join other loyal customers and frequent your restaurant. It highlights the distinctive character of your restaurant in a way that appeals to guests, encourages them to visit and gets them spending more money when they visit. The underlying structure of a loyalty program is the core program. It explains the program's rewards and how they are earned, redeemed, and how they expire.

You want to develop a program that will grab your guests' attention and encourage incremental increases in spending over time. The core loyalty program selected by your restaurant should enable promotions and showcase it or its type of cuisine. For example, if a signature item anchors your menu, your promotions should accentuate that signature item on the menu to encourage customers to come for that specific dish, and also to try complementary products. On the other hand, an eclectic, dynamic menu lends itself to promotions that encourage guests to try lots of different items, and to come for lunch as well as dinner.

Layered programs are sometimes added to a core loyalty program to add depth and tailor it to a specific type of guest, and to strengthen your guests' connection to the restaurant. For example, a birthday promotion of a free meal or dessert could entice people to celebrate their special day at your restaurant.

You can influence your guests' buying behavior by using promotion programs. They give you a lever that enables you to engage with your guests, discover their preferences and encourage more frequent visits. An effective promotion will generate more traffic in the slow periods of the day, inspire customers to try new menu items, and keep the restaurant in the minds of customers.

Let's Practice!

Let's try your pronunciation!

Instructions: Complete the following words using vowels. Practice saying them aloud. Check your pronunciation with your instructor.

1. _ncr_m_nt_l
2. _cc_nt__t_
3. D_pth
4. B_rthd_y
5. M_nths

Let's Practice!

Audrey talks about the customer loyalty program.

Instructions: Complete the text below by choosing from the options that you are given. Read the complete text aloud. Check your pronunciation with your instructor.

consumers / loyalty / incremental / accentuate / anchors
complementary / underlying / appeal

The core program is the _____ structure of a _____ program. The goal is to create a program that will capture your guests' attention and motivate _____ spending over a long period of time. The program should enable promotions that _____ your restaurant. If a signature item _____ your menu, your promotions should build _____ of that item across a wide range of _____ and encourage _____ product purchases.

Extension Activity

Find out about customer loyalty programs in your area.

Instructions: Complete the following steps. Fill in the Self-Assessment.

- Research 3 stores in your city. These could be supermarkets or other retail stores.
- Go online or to the stores themselves.
- Answer the following questions about these stores:
What loyalty programs do they have for customers? Do they offer a special card for loyal customers? What are the advantages and disadvantages of joining the programs? Do you or your friends belong to any programs? Would you ever sign up for one?
- Discuss your findings in groups.

Self-Assessment

Yes

No

I identify the loyalty programs in 3 stores in my city.

☐ ☐

I give my opinion about different loyalty programs.

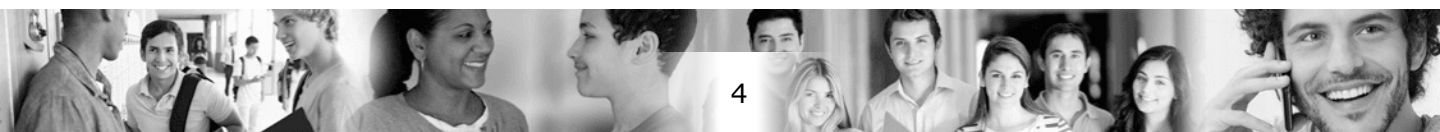

☐ ☐

I discuss loyalty programs in a group.

☐ ☐

Target Words

- distinctive (adjective): being different or having a unique quality or characteristic e.g. It highlights the distinctive character of your restaurant.
- underlying (adjective): important not easily noticed e.g. The underlying structure of a loyalty program is the core program.
- to redeem (verb): to exchange something for goods equal to its value
e.g. Rewards programs need to explain clearly how points can be redeemed.
- incremental (adjective): increasing in amount gradually e.g. You want to develop a program that will grab your guests' attention and encourage incremental increases in spending over time.
- to accentuate (verb): to make something more noticeable
e.g. Your promotions should accentuate that signature item on your menu.
- complementary (adjective): go well together
e.g. Encourage customers to come for that specific dish, and also to try complementary products.
- lever (noun): something you use to influence a situation to get the result that you want e.g. They give you a lever to engage with your guests, discover their preferences and encourage more frequent visits.
- to generate (verb): to produce or cause something
e.g. An effective promotion will generate more traffic in the slow periods of the day.

Learning Points

Consonant Clusters: th and nt

Consonant clusters are groups of two consonants or more together. They form a specific sound when they are combined in a particular way. Usually the sounds of some of the consonants may be reduced or dropped.

In -th consonant clusters, the /th/ sound can be changed or dropped to sound more like a /t/ sound. In the plural form of words ending in th, the final sound can be /s/ or /z/.

Example: months = /mons/

In -nt consonant clusters, the /t/ sound can be dropped if it is followed by a vowel sound. In that case, a flapped /n/ is used in its place.

Examples: center = /cen'ner/ or twenty = /twen'ny/

Practice reading the following sentences aloud:

Examples:

- Layered programs are sometimes added to a core loyalty program to add depth and tailor it to a specific type of guest.
- You want to develop a program that will grab your guests' attention and encourage incremental increases in spending over time.
- Your promotions should accentuate that signature item on your menu.

Intonation in Lists

When you talk about lists, it is important to use the right stress and intonation.

When naming items in a list, you use rising intonation for the first item in the list and falling intonation for the last. Falling intonation indicates the end of the list.

Example: It explains the program's rewards and how they are ↗earned, ↗redeemed, and ↘how they expire.

Practice the following sentences from the text:

Examples:

- Every loyalty program is comprised of three basic elements: a core program, layered programs and promotions.
- It highlights the distinctive character of your restaurant in a way that appeals to guests, encourages them to visit frequently and gets them spending more money when they visit.
- An effective promotion will generate traffic in the slow periods of the day, inspire customers to try new menu items, and keep the restaurant in the minds of customers.

