

Instructor: Date:

Learner: Regional Branch:

Program: Center:

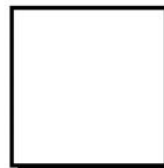

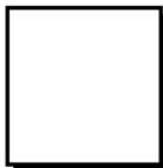

CONTENT

- Let's Start! • Let's Explore! • Let's Practice! • Extension Activity • Target Words • Learning Points

Let's Start!

A refresher on customer service!

Learning Outcome

Describe emotions and feelings in present and past situations in spoken or written texts and in work and social contexts.

Ask your partner:

- What things do you consider to be examples of good customer service?
- What do you consider to be bad customer service?

Can Do Statements

- I can talk about work and dealing with customers.
- I can express annoyance using will and would.
- I can express that a fairly certain condition will be fulfilled using when or if.

Let's Explore!

Vanessa calls her staff in for a meeting. Are the staff throwing jabs at one another?

* To "throw a jab" at someone means to insult someone by saying negative things.

Instructions: Read the text aloud.

- Vanessa: Let's get to it. As you are all aware we seem to have quite a few incidents with our guests as of late. As a result, there are some not so pleasant reviews floating around online. So today's staff meeting is a refresher on customer service. There's a lot we will touch base on.
- Rachel: Fantastic!
- Vanessa: If everyone will take a seat, we can get started.
- Michael: It's like our first week of training all over again.
- Vanessa: Alright, so we all know that if we wait tables with efficiency, we maximize sales. However, we want to look at how we can maximize our sales over a longer period of time than just one visit. If the guests feel as welcome in the restaurant as they do in their own dining room, they're going to come back. So, how do we go about doing this?
- Michael: When we are on the restaurant floor, we smile. The restaurant is a stage and we are actors ... so we should be smiling all the time! We will stand straight, not slouch, and smile!
- Vanessa: It is important that everyone realizes that their primary job is connecting with the guests. When we've created an environment that makes every guest feel comfortable, the guest will want to come back to enjoy it again. More importantly, we need to eliminate guest complaints.
- Michael: The guests seem to love to complain ... especially about Rachel, when she's walking around barefoot. If she would stop doing bizarre things, we wouldn't have any problems! Everything is always calmer when she's not here. She would be the one causing issues. It's so like her!
- Rachel: I'm right here guys. Perhaps, if Mike keeps track of what we have in stock, we won't get any complaints.
- Vanessa: When you all settle down, we can start and we certainly don't have all day. So, let's stop throwing jabs at one another and get started.

Let's Practice!

Please deal with customers properly!

Instructions: Read the sentences below. Choose the option that best completes each sentence. Practice saying the sentences aloud. Check your pronunciation with your instructor.

- We want to look at how we can _____ our sales over a longer period of time and not on just one visit.
a) maximize b) maximus c) maximum
- It is important that everyone _____ that their primary job is connecting with the guests.
a) realizes b) realizing c) realization
- Today's staff meeting is a _____ on customer service.
a) refreshing b) fresh c) refresher
- As a result, there are some not so _____ reviews floating around online.
a) pleasant b) pleasing c) pleased
- We seem to have had quite a few incidents with our _____ as of late.
a) guests b) guess c) guessing

Let's Practice!

We want our customers to come back.

Instructions: Unscramble the words in order to find the mystery sentence. Read the sentences aloud. Check your pronunciation with your instructor.

- get / . / If / everyone / we / seat, / started / take / will / a / can

- If she / would / problems! / we wouldn't / stop doing / any / have / bizarre things,

- would / causing / be / the / issues / . / one / She

- working next / the manager / If / us the / week. / would give / day I'm / know what / I would / schedule,

Extension Activity

Create a list of the aspects of great customer service.

Instructions: Complete the following steps. Fill in the Self-Assessment.

- With a classmate, brainstorm the qualities of good customer and bad customer service. Consider different types of customer service, such as face-to-face or on the phone.
- Create a chart with these qualities written in point form or complete sentences.
- Present your chart in groups. Do you share similar ideas with others in the group? What influenced your ideas? Do any of your classmates have experience helping customers?
- Discuss the conditions that can lead to bad customer service.
- Share personal stories when you think you've been a bad customer or have received bad customer service.

Self-Assessment

Yes

No

I work with a classmate to brainstorm the qualities of good customer service.

☐ ☐

I create a chart to show these qualities.

☐ ☐

I present my ideas in groups.

☐ ☐

I share personal stories related to customer service.

☐ ☐

Target Words

- to float around (verb): to be discussed by a lot of people e.g. As a result, there are some not so pleasant reviews floating around online.
- refresher (noun): an activity that revises or updates one's skills or knowledge e.g. So today's staff meeting is a refresher on customer service.
- to touch base on (verb): to talk briefly about e.g. There's a lot we will touch base on.
- to maximize (verb): to increase something as much as possible
e.g. We must maximize our sales.
- primary (adjective): most important e.g. It is important that everyone realizes that their primary job is connecting with the guests.
- to cause (verb): to make something happen
e.g. She would be the one causing issues. It's so like her.

Learning Points

Modals to Express Annoyance: Will and Would

You can use modals to express annoyance or disapproval, or to describe a particular behavior.

You use will or would to express annoyance and criticize people's behavior or habits.

Will and would can be used to describe habits or things that are true.

Example: Every day, Dan will come to our restaurant and greet all our customers personally.

At school Dan would always follow the teacher's instructions.

You can use will or would to criticize people's behavior and habits and express annoyance at a person or a situation.

Example: The washing machine won't start!

The restaurant is so much quieter without Mike. He would really ruin the atmosphere!

You can use will with an if-clause to suggest disapproval.

Example: If you will complain so much, I'm not surprised customers are giving you such low ratings!

Examples:

- We will stand straight, not slouch, and smile!
- If she will stop doing bizarre things, we should have no problems!
- She would be the one causing issues. It's so like her!

Learning Points

When and If

You use when and if to talk about conditions that will be fulfilled before a situation can happen.

You use the Present Real Conditional to talk about things you normally do in real-life situations.

You use when with the Present Perfect to talk about a condition that needs to be completed before another one can occur.

You use both if and when in the Present Real Conditional.

For example: If there are other areas that need improving, I usually like to hear from my staff about it.

When suggests that something happens regularly.

For example: When I have a day off from work, I like to go to the mall.

Notice the structure of this type of conditional:

If/When ... Simple Present ... , ... Simple Present ...

You use when with the Present Perfect to suggest that something needs to happen before something else can happen. In that context, when has the meaning of as soon as, after, until.

For example: We'll get started when everyone has arrived.

Examples:

- When you all settle down, we can start.
- If everyone has taken a seat, we'll get started.
- When we are on the restaurant floor, we smile.
- If we wait tables with efficiency, we maximize sales.

