

Instructor: Date:

Learner: Regional Branch:

Program: Center:

CONTENT

- Let's Start! • Let's Explore! • Let's Practice! • Extension Activity • Target Words • Learning Points

Let's Start!

Let's review!

Learning Outcome

Express duty, advice, willingness, or intention to do something in spoken or written texts and in work and social contexts.

Ask your partner:

- Is it better to be a boss or an employee? Why?
- What's the best way to pass job interviews?

Can Do Statements

- I can talk about work and dealing with customers.
- I can express annoyance, criticism, promises and threats, preference or reluctance.
- I can express duty, advice or obligation in the present and in the past.

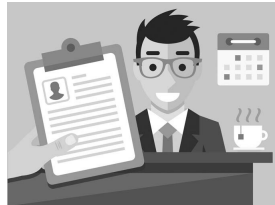

Let's Explore!

Why is it important to have a cursory idea of the applicant?

* "Cursory" means done quickly without a lot of detail.

Instructions: Read the text aloud.

Before you start interviewing candidates, you should have prepared the appropriate requirements list, needs assessment and interview questions that will result in you making the best choice possible for your restaurant.

1. Be prepared. You had better look over the applicant's résumé and job application in advance so you have a cursory idea of the person you're interviewing.
2. Be clear about what you are looking for. Before interviewing, you ought to know what the position entails and what is expected from the person who fills the position. Good managers will have a list of the essential characteristics needed for the job and will use this as a guideline for the interview.
3. Ask questions mindfully. When interviewing, you should avoid asking "yes" or "no" questions. These will only get you one-word answers. You must ask open-ended questions that will encourage the applicant to give more details about themselves and what distinctive skills and experience they may have. For example, avoid asking, "Do you have experience as a server?" Instead say, "Tell me about your serving experience, and what you have learned from that serving experience." Asking these types of questions will allow you to get a feel for the applicant as a person and to see how they may fit into the culture of your team.
4. Keep an eye out for red flags. During an interview you can start to get a feel for the person you might hire. Sometimes you will see negative signs or red flags in the person's responses, indications that they may not be a good fit for your restaurant. Make sure you give the applicant the opportunity to talk honestly about themselves and their past work experience. Do not be domineering and try not to interject too much.
5. At the end of the interview, give the applicant time to ask questions. Questions can indicate an interest in the restaurant and can also give an indication of how knowledgeable the applicant is about the industry.

Let's Practice!

Cindy reviews some words related to customer service. What are they?

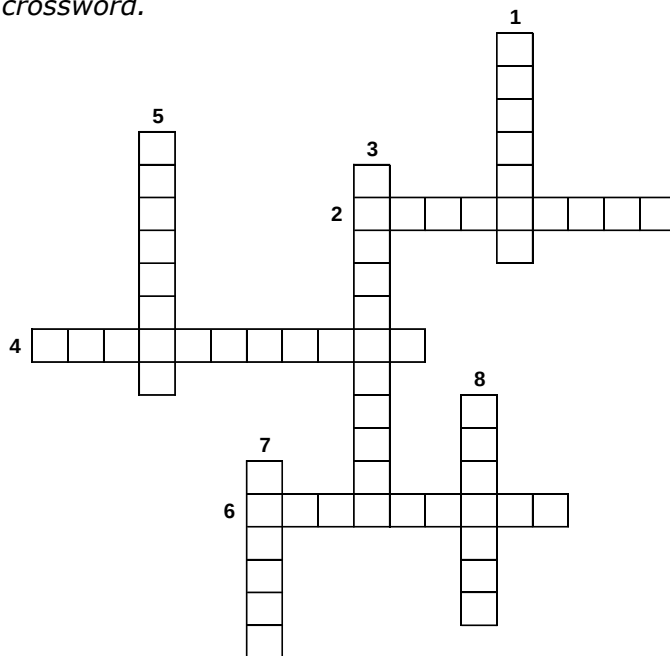

Instructions: Read the clues. Complete the crossword.

Down

1. Done quickly without a lot of detail.
3. Having a special quality, character, or appearance that is different and easy to recognize.
5. To cause something to happen.
7. A person who brings your food and drinks at a restaurant; a waiter or waitress.
8. To be a part of.

Across

2. To interrupt what someone else is saying with a sudden remark.
4. Trying to control other people without considering their feelings or ideas.
6. Extremely important and necessary.

Let's Practice!

Cindy gives Richard some advice and reminds him of his obligations.

Instructions: Complete the sentences by choosing from the options that you are given. Read the complete sentences aloud. Check your pronunciation with your instructor.

Word Bank

should avoid / should have given / had better / must ask / had to get a feel

1. You _____ look over the applicant's résumé and job application in advance.
2. You _____ asking "yes" or "no" questions.
3. You _____ open-ended questions that will encourage the applicant to give more details about themselves.
4. You _____ for the personality of the applicant.
5. You _____ the applicant the chance to tell you honestly about themselves.

Extension Activity

My Future Career

Instructions: Complete the following steps. Fill in the Self-Assessment.

- With a partner, discuss the difference between the words "job" and "career".
- Ask your partner the following questions:
What career would you like to have in the future?
What attracts you to this?
What do you hope to accomplish?
What are some of the benefits that would come with this type of work?
What are you doing to prepare yourself for this career?
What are you going to do to prepare yourself for this career?
Have you had any previous experience in this area?
- Write a text of 2-3 paragraphs about your future career.
- If you don't know what you want to do in the future, write about a field that you know well. Proofread your text for correct spelling and punctuation. Share your text with a classmate.

Self-Assessment

Yes

No

I discuss the difference between "job" and "career".

☐ ☐

I brainstorm ideas with a partner.

☐ ☐

I write a text about my future career.

☐ ☐

I share my essay with a partner.

☐ ☐

Target Words

- domineering (adjective): trying to exert control over other people
e.g. Do not be domineering.
- server (noun): a person who brings your food and drinks in a restaurant; a waiter or waitress e.g. Do you have experience as a server?
- to fit into (verb): to be a part of e.g. Asking these types of questions will allow you to see how they may fit into your team.
- to interject (verb): to insert yourself into someone else's conversation e.g. Try not to interject too much.
- essential (adjective): extremely important and necessary e.g. Good managers will have a list of the essential characteristics needed for a job.
- to result in (verb): to make something happen
e.g. Interview questions will result in you making the best choice possible.
- distinctive (adjective): having a special quality, character, or appearance that is different and easy to recognize e.g. Encourage the applicant to give more details about distinctive skills they may have.

Learning Points

Emoting with Modals

You can use modals to express annoyance, criticism, disapproval, promises, threats, preference or reluctance.

Will and would can be used to describe habits or things that are true.

Examples:

Every day, Dan will come to our restaurant and greet all our customers personally.

At school Dan would always follow the teacher's instructions.

You can use will or would to criticize people's behavior and habits and express annoyance at someone or a situation.

Examples:

The washing machine won't start!

The restaurant is so much quieter without Mike. He would really ruin the atmosphere!

You can use will with an if-clause to suggest disapproval.

Example:

If you will continue to complain to the customers, they will keep giving you low ratings!

You use can, could, might or should + infinitive to express criticism or disapproval in the present or in the future.

Examples:

You can be really annoying sometimes!

Our waiters could step up a little more!

You use can, could, might or should + Perfect Infinitive to express criticism or disapproval about a past situation.

Examples:

You could have tried to solve this problem before it became too big.

You really should have consulted me on this.

You use would rather/would sooner + Simple Past to talk about a preference or strong advice in the present or the future.

Examples:

I'd rather you focused on customer service.

Vanessa would sooner I stayed in the kitchen.

You also use would have preferred to + infinitive to express preference or advice.

Example:

I would have preferred to receive higher ratings.

Examples:

- Managers will have the essential characteristics they're looking for in mind when they hire,

Learning Points

and these help by providing a guideline.

- She would only give me one-word answers!
- If you will ask better questions, they would more talk about themselves and their experiences.
- You might want to ask questions more mindfully.
- You can be more prepared next time.
- You could have touched on her experiences at the bistro.
- She would sooner I interviewed the other applicant.
- We would have preferred to hire them both.

Learning Points

Modals for Duty and Advice in the Past and Present

You can use a variety of modals to talk about advice, duties and obligations.

You use should, ought to and had better to express advice or strong advice in the present.

You use must to show obligation in the present.

You use should and have to to express duty and obligation in the past.

The most common modals for giving advice are: should, ought to and had better.

Should is the most common modal used to give advice. You also use should for questions.

Ought to is used for giving strong advice.

Had better is much stronger than either should or ought to. It is used to give an order or to suggest that something negative will happen if you refuse the advice.

You cannot use must to show duty or obligation in the past.

You use should + have + Past Participle to express duty in the past.

Example: You should have told me about your problems with the customers yesterday.

You use had to before verbs that talk about necessity. Had to implies that someone else imposed the necessity on you.

Example: You had to leave the kitchen completely clean before you left.

Look at the following examples:

Examples:

- You should have prepared the appropriate requirements list, needs assessment and interview questions.
- You had better look over the applicant's résumé and job application in advance.
- You should avoid asking "yes" or "no" questions.
- You must ask open-ended questions that will encourage the applicant to give more details about themselves.
- You ought to know what the position entails and what is expected from the person who fills the position.
- You had to get a feel for the personality of the applicant.

