

Instructor: Date:

Learner: Regional Branch:

Program: Center:

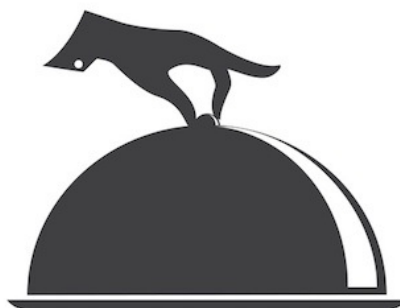

CONTENT

- Let's Start! • Let's Explore! • Let's Practice! • Extension Activity • Target Words • Learning Points

Let's Start!

Do you have what it takes to work in the restaurant industry?

Learning Outcome

Express duty, advice, willingness, or intention to do something in spoken or written texts and in work and social contexts.

Ask your partner:

- Do you like interacting with people? Why or why not?
- Would you work in a restaurant? What would you do?

Can Do Statements

- I can talk about work and dealing with customers.
- I can express that a fairly certain condition will be fulfilled using when or if.
- I can express duty or obligation in the past.

Let's Explore!

Understanding how a restaurant works is a challenge in and of itself!

* "In and of itself" means on its own, separate from other things.

Instructions: Read the text aloud.

Working in a restaurant isn't for everyone. Restaurant employees face a high-pressure customer service situation every day. The position needs to be handled in a delicate, tactful manner. If you are going to be a successful restaurant employee, you must possess certain traits.

The goal of all restaurant employees, from busboy to bartender to manager, is to provide outstanding service and quality food to their customers. When people have chosen to go out to a restaurant for a night off from cooking, or to celebrate a special occasion, the experience is almost as important as the food. As a restaurant employee, it is your job to provide that service in a friendly and professional manner. Keep your interactions pleasant even when a customer has been unreasonable or rude. You represent the restaurant, not just yourself.

Every customer has different likes and preferences. If you are a bartender, server or a cook, you have to be able to accommodate your customer's demands and specifications. If you don't consistently provide excellent service, you may diminish your restaurant's reputation. There is a proliferation of food allergies and sensitivities and something as innocuous as using the same knife to cut different types of dessert can be a potential health risk. When you have taken steps to prevent health concerns, you reduce the risk of liability for your restaurant.

Prioritization on the job is a challenge. A good restaurant employee must be able to handle multiple orders from many tables at the same time. You may have to order another round of drinks from the bartender, grab more napkins, print a bill and check on table seven's food. You must be able to handle these tasks with efficiency and poise. If you are easily flustered, you will become overwhelmed.

Restaurant employees need to be prepared to be very flexible with their shifts. Even if you have a set schedule, it's possible that it will change. A big reservation, good or bad weather or a nearby event can mean sudden changes to staffing needs. You may be called on to cover a shift on your day off or you may be scheduled to work until 9:00 only to find yourself still working at quarter to one.

Let's Practice!

What are the requirements for the staff in the restaurant?

Instructions: Classify the following sentences into the given categories. Read the sentences aloud. Check your pronunciation with your instructor.

- | | |
|--|--|
| <ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1. Employees needn't waste their time on tasks like this. 2. They had to take orders and deliver food to precise specifications. 3. They should have memorized the specials. 4. They had to handle these tasks with efficiency and poise. | <ol style="list-style-type: none"> 5. To be a successful restaurant employee, you should have understood that certain traits were needed. 6. You ought to hand in your résumé. 7. They must provide better service. 8. My former restaurant employees should have been able to handle multiple orders from multiple tables simultaneously. |
|--|--|

Expresses Duty or Obligation in the Past

Does NOT Express Duty or Obligation in the Past

Let's Practice!

We require the best staff for our restaurant.

Instructions: Complete the sentences below by choosing from the options that you are given. Read the complete sentences aloud. Check your pronunciation with your instructor.

Word Bank

When you have finished / you will become overwhelmed / When you keep your interactions pleasant / if we are short on staff / when they've left / If you don't consistently provide excellent service

1. _____, you may diminish your restaurant's reputation.
2. _____, a customer is less likely to become unreasonable or rude.
3. If you are easily flustered, _____.
4. You will be called on to cover the Sunday shift _____.
5. _____ taking their order, you need to get table two more drinks.
6. You'll need to help up front, _____.

Extension Activity

Create a résumé!

Instructions: Complete the following steps. Fill in the Self-Assessment.

- Go online for information on how to write a résumé.
- With a partner, answer the following questions: What is a résumé?, What information should be included?, How long should it be?, What are references?
- Look at sample résumés online as well.
- Create your own résumé using your personal experiences.
- Share your résumé with a partner.

Self-Assessment

Yes No

I discuss the features of a résumé.

☐ ☐

I read samples of résumés.

☐ ☐

I create my own résumé.

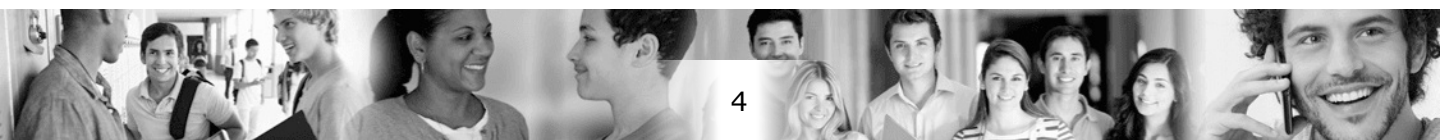

☐ ☐

I share my résumé with a partner.

☐ ☐

Target Words

- high-pressure (adjective): involving a lot of pressure or stress
Example: Restaurant employees face a high-pressure customer service situation every day.
- busboy (noun): a young man whose job is to take away dirty dishes from the tables in a restaurant e.g. The goal of all restaurant employees, from busboy to bartender to manager, is to provide outstanding service and quality food to their customers.
- specification (noun): detailed instruction about how something should be made e.g. You have to be able to accommodate your customer's demands and specifications.
- to diminish (verb): to become or make something become smaller or less; to reduce e.g. If you don't consistently provide excellent service, you may diminish your restaurant's reputation.
- proliferation (noun): sudden increase in the amount or number of something e.g. There is a proliferation of food allergies and sensitivities.
- round of (expression): drinks for a group of people
e.g. You may have to order another round of drinks from the bartender, grab more napkins, print a bill and check on table seven's food.
- set (adjective): fixed
e.g. Even if you have a set schedule, it's possible that it will change.
- to call on (verb): to ask someone to do something e.g. You may be called on to cover a shift on your day off.

Learning Points

When + Present Perfect and If

You use when and if to talk about conditions that will be fulfilled before a situation can happen.

You use when with the Present Perfect to talk about a condition that needs to be completed before another one can occur.

You can also use when with the Present Perfect to suggest that something needs to happen before something else can happen. In that context, when has the meaning of as soon as, after, until.

Example: We'll get started when everyone has arrived.

You normally use if with the Present Simple in an if-clause to talk about a possible outcome. The outcome will be positive if the condition in the if-clause is fulfilled.

Example: We'll get better reviews if everyone works a little harder.

Look at the examples from the text:

Examples:

- Keep your interactions pleasant even when a customer has been unreasonable and rude.
- If you are a bartender, server or a cook, you have to be able to accommodate your customer's demands and specifications.
- If you are easily flustered, you will become overwhelmed.
- If you don't consistently provide excellent service, you may diminish your restaurant's reputation.
- When you have finished taking their order, you need to get table two more drinks.
- You'll need to help up front, when they've left.

Learning Points

Modals for Duty or Obligation in the Past

You can use a variety of modals to talk about duties and obligations, to express what someone is responsible for and to give strong advice and recommendations.

You use should and have to to express duty and obligation in the past.

Let's look at the modals must, have to, have got to, and should.

You cannot use must to express duty or obligation in the past.

You use should + have + past participle to express duty in the past.

Example: You should have told me about your problems with the customers yesterday.

You use had to before verbs that talk about necessity. Had to implies that someone else imposed the necessity on you.

Example: You had to leave the kitchen completely clean before you left. = It implies that it was a duty to leave the kitchen clean, and it may not have been fulfilled.

Read the following examples from the text:

Examples:

- My former restaurant employees should have been able to handle multiple orders from multiple tables simultaneously, but they couldn't.
- They should have memorized the specials.
- You should have handled that in a delicate, friendly manner.
- We had to provide that service in a friendly manner.
- I had to order another round of drinks while grabbing more napkins.

